FOOD FRAUDS NOW PRACTICED UNSCRUPULQUS

Paul Pierce, the "What to Eat" Expert. Who Recently Visited St. Louis, Says City Inspections Should Be Entirely Removed From Political Influences - Some Adulterations Now Common.

WRITTEN FOR THE SUNDAY REPUBLIC.

Paul Pierce, editor of "What to Eat." the Chicago magazine which advocates clocation on the food subject, was in St. Louis a few days ago. He is hiways in earnest when he talks on fraudulent food products. "I should like to see on our statute books," said Mr. Pierce, "a comprehensive, practicul measure for preventing the sale or manufacture of impure foods.

"And food inspection should be removed from the field of politics.

"There are imitations, frauds and adulterations. Food articles are mixed with substances that injuriously affect their purity.

"Inferior substances are substituted for the genuine article.

"From Detroit comes the word that the purity claim is defined and refuse the genuine article.

"Cream is doctored in various ways. Forguter is preserved with borax or borates, and colored with analine dyes, and Prostuced from tallow and colton-seed ell." Preservatives and coloring agents, benacle acid, in catego.

"Just as astounding as these revelations is the statement made by the Assistant Food Commissioner of Illinots, in an address before the Retail Merchants' Association of the State, to the effect that he had located four slaughter houses for horses, mules and donkeys in Chicago.

"Real beef is never handled in these places," said the Assistant Food Commissioner, but their delivers wagons run to markets restaurants and free-lunch salons with great regularity.
